Kyle, thanks so much for putting this together. The sketches look roughly right to me, the only correction I would have is that the driveway turnaround bumps out a bit further (nearly 20 feet total out from the driveway) and then I plan to put the shed in the corner between the driveway and the turnaround (south of the driveway and east of the turnaround).

Hopefully that makes sense. Let me know if it would be helpful to talk more over the phone or in person. I'll be out at the town office by 3pm to get the sign and pay the fee.

Thanks again,
Tom

Tom,

Here's what I drew up. The first attachment is the sketch plan, and the second attachment shows the entire property w/ elevation contours. When you get the chance, send me confirmation that this is a correct depiction of the existing/proposed structures on the property (or let me know if something should be changed).

Hey Tom,

Don't worry about the sketch. I can make one up for you today. Once I finish I'll email it to you to confirm that it's accurate.

Kyle

Thanks Kyle.

Does the sketch plan need to include the entire lot? My concern is that my shed would be too small to draw at that scale.

How do I know zoning classification and setback?

Do I need utilities on the drawing? I'll be digging less than a foot deep to level out the area. The only reason I ask is that I don't have that info at this time, so I'm sure I'd miss the deadline tomorrow if I need to work through 811.

Thanks,
Tom

Hi,

Thanks for this info. I took a look at the sketch plan, and this looks like a lot of information I don't have. Is there someone in the development office who could help me with this? Or is this something that people typically hire someone to do?

Thanks,
Tom
