History of the Town of Canandaigua

Canandaigua officially became a town in 1791. The first town meeting was held in April of that year and presided over by the first supervisor, Israel Chapin. Initially, there was no distinction made between the village and the town of Canandaigua. Then in 1815 the village was officially established and in 1913 it became a city, thus creating two separate entities, the City and the Town of Canandaigua. The original Town of Canandaigua also included Cheshire, Centerfield, and Academy, which still remain within its borders. Cheshire, Academy, and a long gone hamlet by the name of Padelford Station had post offices, and as such were called "Postal Villages" even though they were not incorporated villages. Padelford Station was on County Road 8 near the Farmington Town Line where the Auburn Line (NYCRR) and the Electric Trolley (R&ERR) crossed County Road 8 (Padelford Road). It was an important stop for supplying wood for the steam engines and had a passenger station.

Local History Project Team

Citizens' Implementation Committee Project Team

Purpose / Mission Statement

The Local History Project Team is a sub-group of the Citizens' Implementation Committee (CIC) and was created in early 2018 by the CIC as a result of the Town Board's approval of the list of Comprehensive Plan implementation priorities. The purpose or mission of the team is to discover how best to protect the Town's historic and cultural assets and help share the Town's history with the public.

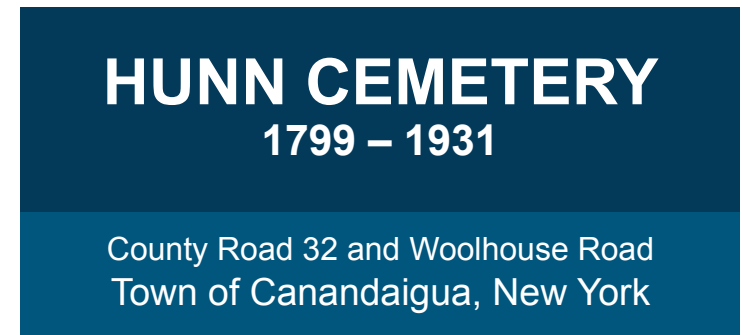

The Comprehensive Plan of the Town of Canandaigua lists 20 goals in total. Two of them focus on historic and cultural resources and this team was instructed to address those:

- Goal 5 - to preserve local history and encourage the protection of historic sites
- Goal 6 - to encourage public awareness of Canandaigua's rich local history

The Hunn Cemetery is one of the Town's oldest public burial grounds. It contains the graves of 177 Town residents who died between 1799 and 1931, including at least eleven veterans of the American Revolution.

The cemetery is named for the Reverend Zadock Hunn, a Connecticut Congregational pastor who came to Canandaigua in 1790. He was a Congregational minister, a teacher at Yale College and a pioneer missionary. Through his ministry and influence, nine Congregational churches were organized in this locality during the period 1792 to 1802, viz: East Bloomfield, South Bristol, Bristol, West Bloomfield, Victor, Canandaigua, Naples, Honeoye and Rushville. Hunn and his family settled along Bristol Road and his descendants continue as Town residents into the twenty-first century. He is buried in this cemetery and on the base of his stone is the following Bible quotation: "He being dead yet speaketh".

The Hunn/Woolhouse Cemetery contains markers showing some of the oldest burials in the Town of Canandaigua. Lying on just under one acre of land, it has been maintained in decent shape. In 2019 it was fenced in with posts and rails as part of an Eagle Scout Badge project by Zac Palmer.

The most recent date found on a monument is the death in 1931 of Martha L. Spears. The most ancient date found was the September 1799 death of Seth Holcomb.

The lot was first conveyed by Oliver Phelps to Joseph Van Norman by deed dated June 30, 1796. In 1833 a Mr. Russel B. Johnson conveyed the said lands he acquired to William Southerland (Liber 54 Deeds, page 301) and according to Johnson "Excepting and reserving therefrom one acre of land laid out and used as a public burying place. Also excepting and reserving for the benefit of the Christian Society, so called, a small piece of land on the lot opposite the burying ground on which a meeting house is erected".

(Excerpts provided by Mr. William G. Scott, Attorney for the Town of Canandaigua in 1964, and also by Ray Henry, Town of Canandaigua Historian in 2019.)
